-----oo0oo-----

These suits involve the Redding Elementary School District's (the "District") obligation to pay for the cost of education of a private school student under the Individuals with 1 summary judgment pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56.

2 I. Factual and Procedural Background

3 Defendant Amanda Goyne is a fourteen-year-old student 4 who has a severe to profound hearing loss. Amanda has been 5 living within the Redding Elementary School District since she 6 became eligible for special education services on December 7, 7 1990. According to her parents (the "Goynes"), Amanda began 8 attending the St. Joseph School as a pre-school student in 1990.
9 Since kindergarten in 1992, Amanda has been attending regular 10 education classes at the St. Joseph and St. Francis private 11 schools.<sup>1</sup> The District provided special education services for 12 Amanda, including speech and language therapy, from 1992 through 13 1999. Pursuant to her "individualized education program" ("IEP")
14 under the IDEA, the District also provided a one-on-one, full-15 time sign language interpreter for Amanda during the school years 16 from 1996 through 1999.

17 In the Spring of 1999, the District informed the Goynes 18 that under the new regulations implementing amendments to the 19 IDEA, the District was no longer obligated to provide special 20 education services or an interpreter for Amanda if she remained 21 enrolled in private school.

22 During Amanda's annual IEP meeting on June 2, 1999, the 23 District offered a regular education classroom placement for 24 Amanda at her neighborhood public school, Turtle Bay. The Goynes 25 rejected the District's offer because they did not believe it was 26

27 <sup>1</sup> Amanda attended St. Joseph Elementary School through 28 the fifth grade in 1998, and then transferred to St. Francis Middle School.

1 an appropriate education program for Amanda.

2           On August 6, 1999, the Goynes filed a request for a due 3 process hearing with the California Special Education Hearing
4 Office pursuant to 20 U.S.C. § 1415(f) and California Education 5 Code sections 56501 and 56502. The Hearing Officer found that 6 the District was not obligated to provide a "free appropriate 7 public education" for Amanda during the 1996-97, 1997-98, and 8 1998-99 school years. With respect to the 1999-2000 school year, 9 however, the Hearing Officer concluded that the District's offer 10 dated June 2nd, 1999, was insufficient and did not provide a 11 "free appropriate public education" under the IDEA. The Hearing
12 Officer accordingly ordered the District to reimburse the Goynes 13 for the cost of Amanda's tuition at St. Francis Middle School for 14 that year through March 13, 2000.<sup>2</sup> The Hearing Officer also 15 determined that the District must reimburse the Goynes for the 16 cost of Amanda's full-time interpreter for the 1999-2000 school
17 year through March 13, 2000. Finally, the Hearing Officer found 18 that the District did not conduct an appropriate assessment of 19 Amanda's "educational and social-emotional needs" and thus, must 20 reimburse the Goynes for the cost of an independent evaluation.

21           Both parties have appealed the Hearing Officer's 22 decision pursuant to 20 U.S.C. § 1415(i)(2).<sup>3</sup>

24
25           <sup>2</sup> The Hearing Officer determined that California
26 Education Code section 56506.2(a) barred his ability to award
27 prospective relief beyond the date of the hearing, March 13, 2000.

28           <sup>3</sup> This court consolidated the two separate actions in an order filed August 11, 2000.

1 II. Applicable Law

2           The IDEA, originally enacted in 1975 as the "Education 3 for All Handicapped Children Act," provides federal assistance to 4 state and local agencies for the education of children with 5 disabilities. To qualify for assistance under the Act, a State 6 must provide a "free appropriate public education" ("FAPE") for 7 disabled children that is tailored to the unique needs of the 8 disabled child through the development of an "individualized 9 educational program." 20 U.S.C. § 1412(a)(1)&(4).

10           A "free appropriate public education" means "special 11 education and related services" that:

- 12           (A) have been provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge;
13           (B) meet the standards of the State educational agency; 14           (C) include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education in the State involved; and 15           (D) are provided in conformity with the individualized education program required under [the Act].

16 20 U.S.C. § 1401(8). An "individualized education program" or 17 "IEP" is "a written statement for each child with a disability 18 that is developed, reviewed, and revised in accordance with 19 section 1414(d) of [the Act]." 20 U.S.C. § 1401(11).

20           Under section 1414(d), the local educational agency 21 "shall have in effect, for each child with a disability in its 22 jurisdiction, an individualized education program." 20 U.S.C. § 23 1414(d)(2). The IEP is developed and reviewed each year by a 24 team comprised of the child's parents, teachers and other 25 specialists. 20 U.S.C. § 1414(d)(1)(B). The IEP team must 26 review the IEP annually, and make appropriate revisions.

27           Section 1412, subdivision (a)(10) addresses the state's 28 obligations with respect to "children enrolled in private schools

1 by their parents," a circumstance which is commonly referred to 2 as "unilateral enrollment or placement." 20 U.S.C. § 3 1412(a)(10)(A)&(C). The provision generally requires a state to 4 provide special education and related services for unilaterally 5 placed children. However, a local education agency is not 6 required

7 to pay for the cost of education, including special 8 education and related services, of a child with a disability
9 at a private school or facility if that agency made a free
10 appropriate education available to the child and the parents 11 elected to place the child in such private school or 12 facility.

13 20 U.S.C. § 1412(a)(10)(C)(i).

14 Before the 1997 amendments to the IDEA, regulations 15 under the Act only excused the payment of "the cost of 16 education," but not "special education and related services."

17 See 34 C.F.R. § 300.403 (1996-1998) ("If a child with a 18 disability has FAPE available and the parents choose to place the 19 child in a private school or facility, the public agency is not 20 required by this part to pay for the child's education at the 21 private school or facility.").

22 Current section 1412 further states:

23 If the parents of a child with a disability, who previously 24 received special education and related services under the 25 authority of a public agency, enroll the child in a private 26 elementary or secondary school without the consent of 27 referral by the public agency, a court or a hearing officer 28 may require the agency to reimburse the parents for the cost of that enrollment if the court or hearing officer finds that the agency had not made a free appropriate public education available to the child in a timely manner prior to that enrollment.

29 20 U.S.C. § 1412(a)(10)(C)(ii). This language codifies School
30 Comm. of the Town of Burlington v. Department of Educ.

1 ("Burlington"), 471 U.S. 359, 369 (1985), which held that a 2 parent has an equitable right to reimbursement for the cost of an 3 appropriate education in private school when the local 4 educational agency is unable to offer an appropriate placement in 5 public school.

6           The Act also requires participating states to establish 7 administrative procedures for the resolution of disputes 8 concerning a disabled child's IEP. See 20 U.S.C. § 1415. An 9 aggrieved party may appeal administrative findings and decisions
10 by filing a complaint in a district court of the United States.

11 III. Discussion

12           The IDEA does not employ the usual deferential standard 13 of review for administrative decisions, but rather provides that 14 the court "(i) shall receive the records of the administrative 15 proceedings; (ii) shall hear additional evidence at the request 16 of a party; and (iii) basing its decision on the preponderance of 17 the evidence, shall grant such relief as the court determines is 18 appropriate." 20 U.S.C. §1415(2)(B).

19           Although the Ninth Circuit has characterized the 20 court's review under the IDEA as de novo, the requirement that 21 the district court receive the Hearing Officer's record "carries 22 with it the implied requirement that due weight shall be given to 23 the [administrative] proceedings." Board of Educ. v. Rowley, 458
24 U.S. 176, 206 (1982); Seattle Sch. Dist., No. 1 v. B.S., 82 F.3d 25 1493, 1499 (9th Cir. 1996). The amount of deference given to the 26 administrative findings is within the court's discretion, and 27 increases when the findings are "thorough and careful."
28 Capistrano Unified Sch. Dist. v. Wartenberg, 59 F.3d 884, 891

1 (9th Cir. 1995).

2           The Ninth Circuit has also recognized that the 3 procedure under the IDEA is "not a true summary judgment 4 procedure," but is "essentially ... a bench trial based on a 5 stipulated record." Ojai Unified Sch. Dist. v. Jackson, 4 F.3d 6 1467, 1472 (9th Cir. 1993). "It is hard to see what else the 7 district court could do as a practical matter under the statute 8 except read the administrative record, consider the new evidence, 9 and make an independent judgment based on a preponderance of 10 evidence and giving due weight to the hearing officer's 11 determinations." Capistrano, 59 F.3d at 892. "Even though [this 12 method of review] does not fit well into any pigeonhole of the 13 Federal Rules of Civil Procedure," it is appropriate because it 14 "appears to be what Congress intended under the Act."
15 Capistrano, 59 F.3d at 892.

16           "A court's inquiry in suits brought under [the IDEA] is 17 twofold." Rowley, 458 U.S. at 206. "First, has the [District] 18 complied with the procedures set forth in the Act?" Id. "And 19 second, is the individualized educational program developed 20 through the Act's procedures reasonably calculated to enable the 21 child to receive educational benefits?" Id. at 207.

22           A. The District's Compliance with Procedural Requirements
23           During the 1996-97, 1997-98, and 1998-99 School Years

24           The Goynes argue that the District committed procedural 25 violations during the 1996-97, 1997-98, and 1998-99 school years
26 which resulted in the denial of FAPE. Specifically, the Goynes 27 claim that "they never had a true opportunity to choose an 28 appropriate public placement for [Amanda]," because the District

1 did not make a formal written offer and recommendation for 2 placement of Amanda in public school.<sup>4</sup> (Cross-Motion at 23).
3 According to the Goynes, they intended to enroll Amanda in public 4 school if the District had an appropriate program.

5         The Hearing Officer did not consider the District's 6 alleged failure to make a formal written offer of FAPE, but found 7 that the District was not obligated to provide FAPE for Amanda 8 during those years because "her parents chose to place her in a 9 private school setting."<sup>5</sup> (Pl.'s Ex. 20 at 5-7). The Hearing 10 Officer determined that the Goynes were not "dissatisfied with 11 the public school program," but rather, the Goynes "preferred" 12 the program and environment at the private schools. (See Pl.'s 13 Ex. 20 at 5-6). And the Hearing Officer concluded that the 14 District was "at most, obligated to provide Amanda with a genuine 15 opportunity for equitable participation in special education and 16 related services." (Pl.'s Ex. 20 at 6) (quoting 34 C.F.R. § 17 76.651); 34 C.F.R. § 300.451 (the state educational agency shall 18 ensure that the requirements of 34 C.F.R. §§76.651-76.662 are 19 met).

20 ///

21
22         <sup>4</sup> The Goynes also argue that the District failed to 23 adequately inform them of certain rights pursuant to 20 U.S.C. § 24 1415(d)(2) and California Education Code § 56301. In support of 25 this argument, the Goynes' offered only one side of a two-sided document titled "Notification of Parent-Child Rights." (Def.'s Ex. 2 at 24, 29, and 34). In response, the District offered the second side, which clearly discusses the alleged rights. As a result, this claim has no merit.

26         <sup>5</sup> In his decision, the Hearing Officer seems to use the 27 terms "provide" and "offer" interchangeably when discussing the District's obligation to pay for the cost of Amanda's education.

1 In 1996, regulations under the IDEA required that every 2 child with a disability have available a free appropriate public 3 education. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.1 (stating a purpose "[t]o ensure 4 that all children with disabilities have available to them a free 5 appropriate public education"). A school district was not 6 required to pay the cost of a child's education only if the 7 child's parents chose private school in lieu of an appropriate 8 public placement. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.403 ("If a child with a
9 disability has FAPE available and the parents choose to place the 10 child in a private school ... the public agency is not required 11 ... to pay for the child's education at the private school.").
12 The question here is whether a school district must make a formal 13 written offer in order to satisfy its obligation to make FAPE 14 available under the IDEA.

15 In Union School Dist. v. Smith, 15 F.3d 1519 (9th Cir.
16 1994), the Ninth Circuit considered whether the school district 17 was required to make a formal written offer under the IDEA for a 18 particular placement to be considered in deciding whether the 19 school district offered FAPE. The Ninth Circuit recognized that 20 "[t]he IDEA explicitly requires written prior notice to parents 21 when an educational agency proposes, or refuses, to initiate or 22 change the educational placement of a disabled child." Smith, 15
23 F.3d at 1526; see 20 U.S.C. § 1415(b)(3) (current provision).
24 The court held that the requirement of a formal, written offer 25 "should be enforced rigorously" because it serves several 26 important purposes. Smith, 15 F.3d at 1526. A formal written 27 offer alerts the parents to serious consideration of the proposed 28 placement and provides them with an opportunity to accept or

1 reject the offer. Id. The court emphasized that parents must 2 have an opportunity to consider a school district's offer because 3 reimbursement for unilateral placement is only available if the 4 offer is inappropriate. Id.

5 In Smith, the school district claimed that it did not 6 make a formal offer of placement at the other school because the 7 parents had expressed their unwillingness to consider such a 8 placement. Id. at 1525. The Ninth Circuit held that a school 9 district "cannot escape its obligation under the IDEA to offer 10 formally an appropriate educational placement" by arguing that 11 the parents were not willing to accept the placement. Id. at 12 1526.

13 Other district courts in the Ninth Circuit have 14 followed the holding in Smith that the IDEA requires the district
15 to make a formal written offer. See Glendale Unified School
16 District v. Almasi, 122 F. Supp. 2d 1093, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 2000)
17 ("The Court interprets Smith to require that the District 18 formally offer a single, specific program."); Bock v. Santa Cruz 19 City Schools, 1996 WL 539715 (N.D. Cal. 1996) ("A school district 20 must formally offer an appropriate educational placement.").

21 The undisputed facts here establish that the District
22 did not make a formal written offer of placement at a public 23 school. Although the requirement may fairly be characterized as 24 hyper-technical, Smith mandates that a school district must make 25 such an offer for consideration by the parents. The absence of 26 such an offer thus compels a finding that Amanda did not have 27 FAPE available under section 300.403 for the 1996-97, 1997-98, 28 and 1998-99 school years.

1           The court recognizes that procedural violations do not 2 necessarily result in a denial of FAPE under the IDEA unless the 3 violation results in the loss of an educational opportunity, or 4 seriously infringes upon the parents' opportunity to participate 5 in the IEP process. See W.G. v. Bd. of Trustees, 960 F.2d 1479, 6 1484 (9th Cir. 1992). The Goynes do not contend here that Amanda 7 was deprived of an "appropriate" education during the relevant 8 years, but rather, the District's failure to make a formal, 9 written offer of placement deprived Amanda of a "free" education.
10 The court concludes that for the purpose of determining a 11 parent's right to reimbursement for the unilateral placement of a 12 child in private school, a school district's failure to make a 13 formal offer of public placement constitutes a per se denial of 14 FAPE.

15           Before regulations implementing the 1997 amendments to 16 the IDEA became effective in 1999, a parent had "an equitable 17 right to reimbursement for the cost of providing an appropriate 18 private education" when a school district failed to make such 19 appropriate education available in public school. Smith, 15 F.3d 20 at 1524 (quoting Burlington, 471 U.S. at 369). In order to be 21 entitled to reimbursement, the parent's chosen placement must be 22 an "appropriate alternative." Smith, 15 F.3d at 1526 (quoting 23 W.G. v. Board of Trustees, 960 F.2d 1479, 1484 (9th Cir. 1992)); 24 see also Burlington, 471 U.S. at 369 (parents' placement must be 25 "proper under the Act").

26           The evidence here shows that the St. Joseph and St.
27 Francis schools provided an appropriate education for Amanda.
28 During the 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years, Amanda

1 performed exceptionally, earning high marks and exceeding 2 expectations in reading and language skills. (See Pl.'s Ex. 6 at 3 86-89). The Goynes are accordingly entitled to reimbursement for 4 the cost of Amanda's education during those years.

5 B. Sufficiency of the District's 1999-2000 Offer

6 The Goynes rejected the District's offer to place
7 Amanda at the neighborhood school in Turtle Bay for the 1999-2000 8 school year, because they believed the offer did not provide an 9 appropriate education for Amanda. As a result of the District's 10 alleged failure to meet the requirements of FAPE under the IDEA, 11 the Goynes argue that they are entitled to reimbursement.

12 In Rowley, the United States Supreme Court considered 13 the standard for providing a "free appropriate public education" 14 under the Act. The Court emphasized that the Act does not 15 require a state to maximize the potential of each handicapped 16 child. See Rowley, 458 U.S. at 199 ("[T]o require ... the 17 furnishing of every special service necessary to maximize each 18 handicapped child's potential is, we think, further than Congress 19 intended to go."). The Court held that a state satisfies the 20 requirement of the IDEA by providing a "basic floor of 21 opportunity" consisting of "personalized instruction with 22 sufficient support services to permit the child to benefit 23 educationally from that instruction." Id. at 201, 203.

24 The personalized instruction and services "must be 25 provided at public expense, must meet the State's educational 26 standards, must approximate the grade levels use in the State's 27 regular education, and must comport with the child's IEP." Id.
28 at 203; see also 20 U.S.C. § 1401(8). Further, the personalized

1 instruction "should be reasonably calculated to enable the child
2 to achieve passing marks and advance from grade to grade." Id.
3 at 204; see also W.G., 960 F.2d at 1487 ("The substantive 4 standard [for FAPE] is simply 'some educational benefit.'").

5         The Hearing Officer's determination that the District's 6 offer did not provide FAPE for the 1999-2000 school year is 7 inconsistent with the above standards. The Hearing Officer found 8 that "one of Amanda's most significant unique needs for the 1999-9 2000 school year was to be in the presence of peers who would 10 assist her in the learning and socialization process through 11 informal communication." (Pl.'s Ex. 20 at 11). He concluded 12 that the District was not able to meet this unique need because 13 the evidence showed that at that time, Turtle Bay had only a 14 handful of children who could demonstrate rudimentary signing
15 skills. (Pl.'s Ex. 20 at 12). On the other hand, the Hearing 16 Officer emphasized that Amanda's classmates at St. Francis had 17 been with her for several years, and thus "had learned to 18 communicate comfortably with her." Id. at 12.

19         The Hearing Officer's comparison mistakenly places an 20 impossible burden on the District to replicate Amanda's 21 environment at St. Francis, without the benefit of an opportunity 22 to establish a similar peer group at Turtle Bay.' In making his 23 decision, the Hearing Officer cited California Education Code

---

24
25         <sup>6</sup> According to Lori Goyne, Amanda's mother, she held 26 volunteer sign language sessions with Amanda's classmates during 27 the 1995-96 and 1996-97 school years. Lori Goyne taught forty 28 one-hour sessions per year and the students were signing with Amanda on a daily basis during the 1996-97 school year. See (Def.'s Ex. 9 at 61-63) (explaining that Amanda's teacher cooperated by developing a point system to encourage students to practice signing with Amanda).

1 section 56000.5, which states: "It is essential that hard-of-2 hearing and deaf children, like all children, have an education 3 with a sufficient number of language mode peers with whom they 4 can communicate directly and who are of the same, or 5 approximately the same, age and ability level." Cal. Bus. &
6 Prof. Code § 56000.5(b)(4). The court finds no authority 7 suggesting that this provision places a higher burden on the 8 District than the requirements for FAPE under the IDEA.<sup>7</sup>

9         The District's offer satisfies the requirements of the 10 IDEA and the standard set for in Rowley. The District offered 11 regular classroom placement at Turtle Bay during the 1999-2000 12 school year with the same special education services that the 13 District provided in previous years, including speech and 14 language therapy. (See Pl.'s Ex. 31 at 6-7); (See Pl.'s Ex. 20 15 at 9) (finding that the District offered enhanced audio, speech
16 and language therapy, and the use of a sign language 17 interpreter). In addition, the District offered to install 18 sound field equipment in each of Amanda's classrooms, obtain a 19 TTY phone, use closed caption televisions, assign note-takers, 20 and provide on-going disability awareness for general education 21 students. (See id.). To assist with Amanda's transition from 22 St. Francis, the District further promised to assign peer 23 buddies, and provide weekly sessions with the school psychologist 24 and a deaf and hard-of-hearing counselor. (See id.; Pl.'s Ex.
25 16).

26
27         State standards that impose a greater duty are 28 enforceable under the IDEA if such standards are not inconsistent with federal standards. See Smith, 15 F.3d at 1524.

1 Further, the District's offer addressed Amanda's need 2 for language mode peers "in a manner that would afford [her] an 3 opportunity to benefit educationally." Capistrano, 59 F.3d at 4 884, 893. As noted above, the District offered to assign peer 5 buddies who would assist Amanda with her transition to Turtle
6 Bay. The District also promised to offer a sign language
7 elective for sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students at Turtle 8 Bay. Christine Licker, who previously taught such an elective at 9 Turtle Bay, testified that as many as forty students could 10 finger-spell and demonstrate between twenty and fifty signs.
11 (See Pl.'s Ex. 32 at 138, 153). Notably, Ms. Licker stated that 12 she used finger-spelling in her history class and that some 13 students used finger-spelling and signs to communicate with each 14 other. (See id.).

15 Plaintiffs argue that the District should have offered 16 "regionalized programming," whereby all hearing-impaired students 17 in the school district would be educated at one school or "hub" 18 in order to assure that Amanda has a sufficient number of 19 language mode peers. They point to such a program at the 20 Lakewood School in Stanislaus County as an example of what would 21 in their view be an "appropriate" program for Amanda.

22 At oral argument, the District argued that the 23 implementation of such a program would not be practical in Shasta 24 County, because it is more rural than Stanislaus County and does 25 not lend itself to the same kind of region-wide transportation of 26 hearing-impaired students to a single location. The court has no 27 basis to find that the program employed in Stanislaus County 28 would be practical, or even possible, in Shasta County, or that

1 it would provide similar results in Shasta County. Even if such 2 a program would be successful, the IDEA does not require the 3 District to maximize Amanda's learning potential.

4 "An 'appropriate' public education does not mean the 5 absolutely best or 'potential-maximizing' education for 6 [Amanda]." Smith, 15 F.3d at 1524 (quoting Gregory K. v.
7 Longview School Dist., 811 F.2d 1307, 1310 (9th Cir. 1987)).

8 The program outlined by the District is reasonably calculated to 9 enable Amanda to advance from grade to grade. The only other 10 thing the District could do to satisfy the Goynes is to transfer 11 Amanda's peer group from St. Francis to Turtle Bay--what 12 obviously is impossible.

13 It is not surprising that over the seven years since 14 the Goynes placed Amanda in private school, she developed a 15 unique and comforting relationship with her peers at the St.
16 Joseph and St. Francis schools. It does not follow, however, 17 that the District is required to duplicate that environment. The 18 program offered by the District is personalized and provides the 19 same services that have enabled Amanda to excel in previous 20 years. Because the District's offer provides, at a minimum, a 21 basic floor of opportunity for Amanda to achieve academic 22 success, the District has made FAPE available under the IDEA.

23 C. The Cost of a Full-Time Sign Interpreter for 1999-2000

24 Under the current regulations, a school district is not 25 required to pay the cost of special education and related 26 services if the district made FAPE available and the parents 27
28

1 unilaterally placed the child in private school.<sup>8</sup> See 34 C.F.R. § 2 300.403 (1999). The amended language is different from prior 3 regulations, which excused a school district from payment of the 4 cost of a private school education, but required the district to 5 make special education and related services available to children 6 unilaterally placed in private school. See 34 C.F.R. § 300.403 7 (1996).

8 Prior to 1999, the Goynes were entirely satisfied with 9 Amanda's individualized program and the District's provision of 10 special services, including a full-time, one-on-one sign language 11 interpreter. In fact, the Goynes referred to their relationship 12 with the District during this period as a "partnership." (See 13 Pl.'s Ex. 31 at 10). The change in the regulations, not any 14 conduct on the part of the District, is responsible for the 15 Goynes current dissatisfaction.

16 Because the court has concluded above that the District
17 made FAPE available for the 1999-2000 school year, the District
18 is not required to supplement Amanda's private school education
19 with the special service of a full-time, one-on-one sign language 20 interpreter.

21 D. The Cost of an Independent Psychological Assessment

22 The IDEA requires evaluation of a child with a 23 disability for the purpose of determining necessary special 24 education and related services at least once every three years, 25

26 <sup>8</sup> The current regulations further provide that "[n]o 27 private school child with a disability has an individual right to 28 receive some or all of the special education and related services that the child would have received if enrolled in a public school." 34 C.F.R. § 300.454 (1999).

1 and any time "conditions warrant" such an evaluation. 20 C.F.R.
2 § 14114(a)(2).

3           The parties appear to dispute the date of Amanda's last 4 assessment. According to the Hearing Officer, Amanda's last 5 assessment was December 15, 1997, which would have placed her 6 next triennial assessment on December 15, 2000. However, the 7 Goynes argue that Amanda's last assessment was in September of 8 1995. After the IEP meeting on June 2, 1999, the Goynes retained 9 Dr. Victoria Pickering to conduct an independent evaluation of 10 Amanda before the due process hearing in August.

11           Regardless of the due date of her triennial assessment, 12 the Hearing Officer determined that the District's proposed 13 change in placement from private school to Turtle Bay warranted 14 evaluation of Amanda's social and emotional status. See Cal.
15 Educ. Code § 56320 (assessments must consider "all areas related 16 to the suspected disability including, where appropriate, ...
17 social and emotional status"). The Hearing Officer found that 18 "the District had an obligation to assess Amanda's social and 19 psychological needs before convening an IEP meeting to propose 20 such a drastic change in placement." (Pl.'s Ex. 20 at 16).

21           The District argues that its offer did not propose a 22 change in placement because the District did not place Amanda in 23 private school in the first place. Further, the District argues 24 that the Goynes are not entitled to reimbursement for the cost of 25 an independent evaluation unless they obtained the evaluation 26 because they disagreed with the District's own assessment. See 27 Cal. Educ. Code § 56329 ("A parent has the right to obtain, at 28 public expense, an independent educational assessment of the 1 pupil from qualified specialists, .... if the parent disagrees

2 with an assessment obtained by the public education agency.").

3           The Hearing Officer's decision with respect to the 4 District's obligation is supported by the record. The placement 5 of Amanda in public school after she attended private school for 6 seven years could potentially impact her psychological well-7 being, and thus affect the special education services required to 8 to provide her with a basic floor of opportunity for academic 9 progress. As the Hearing Officer found, evaluation was warranted 10 in this circumstance.

11           IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Amanda Goyne's motion for 12 summary judgment with respect to the District's obligation to pay 13 for the cost of her private school education during the 1996-97, 14 1997-98, and 1998-99 school years be, and the same hereby is,
15 GRANTED. The District is hereby ordered to reimburse the Goynes 16 in the amount of $9,725.00, which represents the total cost of 17 Amanda's private school tuition during the 1996-97, 1997-98, and 18 1998-99 school years.

19           IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the District's motion for 20 summary judgment with respect to the District's obligation to 21 provide special education and related services during the 1999-22 2000 school year be, and the same hereby is, GRANTED; and the 23 District's motion with respect to the cost of the independent

5 IT IS SO ORDERED.
